PRINCIPAL'S MESSAGE

In these days of chaos and confusion it would be a strong person who could pause and reflect. The mood of the times seems to be "action at any price". One of the great French writers and philosophers has said - "L'action sans pensée est un vain effort, la pensée sans action, un vain mirage."

A balance must be maintained. History shows us that every era of freedom and license is followed by a harsh Puritanism. It is thus that progress is set back many years. True progress is made at a snail's pace - but the key word is "true".

This year's graduating class faces ever increasing unrest. Much of it appears unwarranted to the older generations; some of it is spiral in cause and effect; some of it is warranted and has well conceived aims. The student power "bit" is patently illogical. If the student knows what it is that he should be studying has he not forsaken the role of student and usurped the role of teacher? Perhaps the student should change his title to teacher and the teacher become the student - studying the resulting chaos!

Seriously though, your problem is going to be to separate the real from the unreal, the possible from the fashionable, or, in more homely language "learn to separate the wheat from the chaff".

W. A. WILKINSON

EDITORIAL

Well, fellow-graduates, here it is - the record of your final year. It's strange, isn't it, to think that we're actually leaving the public school system? School has become a habit for most of us - it regulated and gave a pattern to our lives. This year, our pattern changes, and our feelings of uneasiness are normal; they are the feelings of generations of graduates.

With one difference: this is the year the educational pattern changes, too. Dawson College and the five-year-plan. We're the guinea-pigs! (We gave the kick-off to subject promotion, remember?) All through our school years, changes have been occurring, and this is the biggest change of them all. You've got to admit, even though it's a little annoying, it's exciting, too.

Well, here we go, the guinea-pig graduates, '69.

BAD LUCK

Kristine Vicmanus

How many times have you gone through a day which has been so unlucky that you could scream? Well, for me, today was just such a day.

Although it was Saturday, I had to get up at eight o'clock. There was a ten o'clock sale at Morgan's on leather coats and I wanted to get there early for a good selection. Unfortunately the alarm clock forgot to wake me up, or may be I forgot to wind it up, so I awoke, slightly late, at precisely one thirty-three in the afternoon.

I decided against going to Morgan's, as there would probably be nothing worthwhile left to buy. I was to meet my friend Tobi at Etcetera, a store in Snowdon, at two o'clock, so I had to hurry. I got dressed, but in my haste I tore a button off my blouse. I didn't have time to sew it back on and it didn't really show anyway.

I rushed downstairs for some toast and coffee, but I "charcoal burned" my toast, so I only had coffee. I ran up-stairs and brushed my teeth. Then down the stairs I went, yanked on my coat, hat, and boots, grabbed my purse, and ran out the door.

I almost flew to the bus stop, halting only for the red traffic light. Wouldn't you know it? While I was waiting for the light to change, the bus I should have caught went by. I walked across the street, but just before the curb, I slipped on a patch of ice, and fell. Just then a car turned the corner and splashed me. It wasn't water, or even slush. It was just that wet, filthy snow that is on the street during the winter. I cleaned my coat off and resigned myself to wait ten minutes for the next bus.

It was already two-fifteen. Tobi would be pretty angry at me, since she is always on time. I thought she probably wouldn't even wait for me. The bus came. I got on and paid my fare. I had to stand, though, because the bus was crowded. I forgot to take a transfer, so I asked the bus driver for one. He said he wouldn't give me one, and that I should have taken one when I came on. He made me very angry so I talked back to him. As a result, he threw me off the bus. This was very unfortunate because as I was leaving the bus, I tripped over the bottom step, fell down, and broke my leg.

I am writing this in my nice soft bed. I hope that Fate will take pity on me and release me from this terrible jinx.

Oops! I spilled my medicine.

EMOTIONAL FLIGHT

Diane Chouinard

She taxis down the runway of indifference, Then, after gaining the speed and lift she needs, She soars high into a sky of delight.

But all too soon, she loses her momentum And drifts slowly down to the field of boredom once more. Her flight was short, but left her serene in her sadness.

THE CREATOR

David Rolberg

In the beginning there was only himself and the void. So he, the almighty one, stepped from the infinite darkness and said:--

"Let there be light!"

And there was light. With the light came knowledge and with this vast knowledge, the great one made a world, a lovely world for him to gaze upon, to look upon, and to show beauty where there was nothing before. But, not yet satisfied, he again took the knowledge and shaped it into wondrous things to cover his planet with. He then lay back and contemplated the richness and splendor of the world he owned, and decided he was still not satisfied. He wanted a companion, someone to talk to and share his world, so with the remaining knowledge he made one, and he named him God.
He ran silently, like flowing water. With an unerring sense of direction he beat his path, his shrewd muscles rippling under the beautiful ebony black of his hide that gleamed and sparkled in the crackling light behind him. His ears were small and sharp, his eyes and nose, keen. Cr-r-ash-sh! A tree wavered in the air and came thudding down behind him, alive with flames; somewhere an animal screamed fearfully in the night. His silky paws quickened their pace and the ground flew away under him—things blurred.

Two striped antelope shot out of the red nightmare and past him, scared and bullet-like. A powerful lioness, golden-brown, leaped by him and was gone like a flash into the thickening blue haze of the jungle. A frenzied bull-elephant belowed and raged in the falling jungle, trapped by the angry flames that leapt up higher and higher, licking the sky, with their yellow tongues. The Panther was not the only animal whose instinct, whose nose and eyes and fear drove him from the advancing horror.

His eyes burned. His ribcage swelled and his heart pumped at a frightening rate. Yet he still moved like liquid, sure and steadily, darting in and out of the catching vines and dark green creepers. On and on he went, never stopping, never once slowing.

At last, though, he came to a low spreading tree that was naked and dead. He sprang up to one of the branches to rest, to sniff the air, to get his direction. He sat there for a moment, poised gracefully, ready to move. He was a beautiful spectacle, his black gleaming form silhouetted by the yellow fire that danced in the background; his eyes, two cold pools of fathomless, shimmering black; and his long ivory claws digging violently into the bark as he sniffed the air.

With grace and ease he slipped down to the ground and disappeared, bounding off into the trees again, his long tail curling behind him. At that instant the tree that he had abandoned, the branch that he had just sprung from, became one body of laughing, jeering flame.

On and on went the Panther; on and on, the other animals, for hours, for a seeming eternity as they fled the falling jungle.

PATIENCE
Khazal Paradis

Jeeves had been planning it for a long time. He was now in his tenth year of service to Mr. Porter and to Jeeves's mind, and rightly so, he had won the confidence of his master. Mr. Porter was an unmarried, old man. He was very eccentric and it had taken a while for his household to adapt itself to his strict timetable. He was a fervent lover of animals and kept a lot of his menagerie indoors, which gave the house an unpleasant zoo-smell.

Jeeves had a few collaborators in his plan, also of the domestics. Jennings was to keep with the old man from six in the morning till lunch time and Moore would stick with him from lunch till bed time. Thus Mr. Porter was well-watched and any clue leading to the whereabouts of his fortune would not be missed. When the information needed would have been secured, Jeeves would dispose of the old man. Of course, they would all share the loot in case of success.

Meanwhile it was more and more difficult for Jeeves to remain "cool, calm, and collected," as he was expected to be. Some obstacles seemed to be impossible to overcome; for instance, Mr. Porter was always well-guarded by a faithful St. Bernard who never left his side. Many other difficulties were probably to be met, and Jeeves was torturing his mind trying to anticipate them and find a way out. But after ten years he had had the time to lay out his plans to what he thought was last and most minute detail.

One day, Mr. Porter caught pneumonia. He was very ill and the doctors couldn't do anything to help. Mr. Porter knew he was going to pass away and he called up Jeeves. This was the conversation they had:

"My dear Jeeves, you know I'm going to leave you, and please don't say the contrary."

"Of course, sir."

"As you probably already know, I have no heirs to my fortune. I shall therefore set a fair deal before you. You have ten days to guess my riddle, and if by that time you have not found the hiding place of my money, it will go to the charities. Near the chicken with bright feathers there lay..."
At these words the old man died. Confused thoughts whizzed through Jeeves' mind. So close to having the reward of the ten years of faithful service; oh! how maddening. What did the old man mean? What bright chicken? He must find it by himself. Nobody was going to share what was intended for him alone. The money would fall in his hands like a ripe fruit.

Then he started to think about the riddle. For five days he pondered and searched, but to no avail. By the ninth day he was a nervous wreck and trembled all the time. On the tenth day he could not endure it any more. He became raving mad. After his ten years of waiting this was too much. He jumped off a bridge and disappeared forever.

Now, Mr. Porter had always thought Jeeves a bright man. No thought had lingered in his mind that Jeeves would not guess his obvious riddle. So he had thought it useless to contact the charities for he had had complete trust in Jeeves' mind. And the treasure still lies untouched.

THE STILL SAD MUSIC
OF HUMANITY
Images of a summer night

S. Morrisey

In his one-room apartment he patiently waits for his old age pension. He has to be patient. What can an old man, bent with arthritis, do, but sit and wait? Wait for tomorrow. Wait for the day after tomorrow. Wait his life away.

Soup and bread for lunch; less for breakfast, and not much more for supper. His biggest problem is not money, although that it a constant worry; it is loneliness. Never anyone to talk to. The world moves so fast--jet-age, space age, teenage--but old age somehow does not fit into the scheme.

The doctors stick you full of needles and fill your mouth with pills to keep you alive a few years longer... and for what? To be a lonely old man?

In his one-room apartment overlooking the factories and docks the old man prays for freedom from this life. It is a hot night and the water looks so inviting. Maybe he'll be free tonight.

Riot and rampage. Bum, baby, bum. Soul brother. Cocktails thrown through windows. Televisions and lamps are grabbed; this is better than the installment plan. Run, man, run--through that alleyway. No one sees. No one hears. No one cares.

Black skin against the red brick in the black night.
"Up against the walls," yells the white cop.

Mace, Bullets. TV cameras catch all of the action live and in living colour on C.B.S.

A black man against the wall cries, cries for freedom in this life. The cop frisks him and he is taken to the station.

This evening's cocktail party was the social event of the week. Mrs. Wells - hostess "(extraordinaire"--with her caps sparkling, kept the glasses filled as a good hostess does. All the gossip unfit to print was exchanged and all were happy.
The party ended at 4 a.m. and the coloured maid, after putting the lamp shades back on the lamps, picking up glasses, and wiping up spills, put on her coat and left.

"Whiteys", she says as she leaves.

Most bus stops are the same. Just a steel pole with a sign telling the bus route's number. Wearily the coloured maid climbs the steps and drops her ticket into the box. She walks down the aisle and sits down beside an old, bent, white-haired man who is on his way to the bridge for his freedom. Behind her sits a black man just out of jail on bail returning to hell.

The coloured maid sighs and nods off to sleep as the still sad music plays on.

SUBTERRANEAN HOME BLUES

Jennifer Anderson

And when I was sad, and lost from home,
I came by a brook
Which I misstook
For a ditch in which I could sit and Think.

Of reasons why I should go home again,
To mother and father and their 2.6 kids
Living in a two by six cardboard box,
And all their crutches, piled into one big mess
Consuming, consuming, consuming

Until, at length, they had become Suburban rust
All brown and dry and hiding the shine beneath.

So feeling more miserable in my own

cracking world

I looked up in the sky of
Vast blueness,
And to my surprise
A cloud appeared to be tumbling along
Without a care, without a world, without a sign
Of defeat,
And it suddenly occurred to me
That the most wonderful thing I could ever do,
Would be to jump in a cloud.

And then I was reaching with all my might
Til my fingertips could touch her fleecy down,
So my legs could clamber noisily
After me,
Who was in ecstasy,
Floating and floundering in a dumpling of steam,
That beckoned and enwrapped and spoke of
Far off place,
A luscious dizziness of scarlet and shades
Of pomegranate,
And tossings and softness
And Freedom.

Within a vacuum, a muffled sigh,
Lay I,
In my bed of dandelion fluff
And candy floss
With ostrich feather pillows strewn beneath me
Like blackets of woven snowflakes
And stuffed with cotton flowers.
My playmate became restless and weighted
With warning raindrops;
Her flaxen hair turning old and gray
And as old dreams grow thin
So had she.

And alas, I fell through her grayness
Bearing downward, downward,
Whilst her misty arms begged me to stay
And flailed in my passing breeze.
And my eyes again, came to rest on the Brook
Who bubbled and gurgled and lapped at
My hot hands,
As its laughter sang
"Hurry Home"
So I did.

A THOUSAND THANKS,
WORLD OF MAN
YOU ARE TRULY KIND

Michael Margolick

Yes, I had wandered through the limitless void of the universe. I had climbed the ice mountains and swum the gaseous rivers of many distant planets. I had roamed throughout the plastic forests and aluminum lakes of countless spheres of rock and lava. I had visited the crystal monsters, the silver insects, the silicon octopods, the steel anemones of places remote by eons and parsecs. I had ridden on the fiery trails of comets and danced interminable waltzes with binary stars; I had tossed meteors to their flaming deaths, like pebbles in a brook.

But I wandered aimlessly, randomly, without purpose. I was restless. The singing caves did not please me. The mercury pools did not soothe my aching body. The taste of gold nectar did not satisfy my soul. I could find no fulfilment and so I roamed like a particle of dust—weak, insignificant, and empty.

Until———oh, until that glorious moment when I found your beautiful planet and you welcomed me with open arms. You took me in; you fed and nurtured me and watched me grow. I knew earth was my resting place. The wonders of the cosmos lost whatever power they had had and no more did I long to find a home, for the earth was ideal.

Yet now, as I look back, I see all was not easy. There were hard times—times when you almost exiled me, never to return; but I appealed and your minds softened to my cries. Slowly and surely, we became friends. I became a part of you, and you, a part of me. We were inseparable.

After many centuries, you started to build, to sow and reap. I saw huts and villages, fire, and steam. I saw men crawling like ants through green meadows. I saw you grow and civilize and come together... and our affection grew stronger for it. Alexander the Great, Genghis Khan, Julius Caesar— their names, blended with cries of victory, echoed off the hills.

Then slowly, and for some strange reason, you began to belittle yourselves in front of me. You asked for my friendship. You began...... to worship me. I became stronger, and you, weaker. Ah, I remember the Crusades and the feudal wars with delight. Then it was king versus king, sacrificing thousands to appease my hunger. Robespierre, Napoleon, Bismarck—my benefactors. Your might grew, and with it, you servility to me. And you broke in on this century in a flurry of steel and gasoline in a busy, compact, bustling world of confusion. Mussolini, Hitler what geniuses!

You, mankind, have perfected your worship for me, for now you have the capacity to sacrifice your existence in my name. Here on earth is my ultimate bliss.

Thank you very much, man; you are very kind indeed.

EXSEQUITUR

Daddy, when I was very young

You stood over me, a friendly shadow

To protect my sandcastles—

And me,

Now the sandcastles are gone

And I'm left to wander and search

For the shadow of something
That I never knew—

The shadow that like the castles

Ran through my fingers and—

Blew, away, not hesitating even

To caress the new made flowers
(The ones on my sandcastle)

Or kiss the blue wind,

It flew out to the sea, and there

Was swallowed.

But sometimes I hear it moaning,

Singing, Chanting—and the sea-flowers

Bow their heads and weep yellow tears.
ACTIVITIES
This year, the Student Council has been very active. It has sponsored a film club, a coffee house, several dances, and an executive newspaper. President Bob Sweeney became a member of the Association of Student Council Presidents, having helped to form it. Several reforms were made in the council's constitution including a change in the methods of nominating and electing the executive. This year's Student Council has done much to make life at Monklands interesting, enjoyable, and fruitful.

RED CROSS

In 1968–69 Monklands High participated in an active Red Cross programme. This year’s Penny Drive was successful with collections totalling $216. The plaque winner was Room 103. At Christmas 125 students carolled in the streets of N.D.G., collecting donations and were rewarded by the fun at the sock-hop afterwards. For the spring such events as a Fashion Show, a Car Wash, and a Blood Donor Clinic were planned. Thanks go to the executive and home room representatives for a great year.
Prefects

Monklands' Prefect Board, under the direction of Akram Ftaya and Mike Margolick consisted of twenty-nine students, chosen for leadership qualities, to maintain the school and help visitors etc. Many thanks to Mrs. Lessard for allowing the use of her room as a lounge.

Public Relations

Judy Black is Monklands' Miss CFOX. Ken Vegotsky is our "Star Clipboard" Representative.

Music Library

Velma and Barbara spent many happy lunchtimes ruling over the Music Library and entertaining guests. In all seriousness, though, they were a great help to Mr. Whyte.

Library Assistant

Miss Gerth's little helpers maintained the efficiency of Monklands' library by stamping, sorting, and shelving the literature circulated in school. But it's not all fun so here's to say the readers in the school appreciate you, "Junior Librarians".
The past ski season was one of Monklan's best due to an abundance of snow, enthusiastic support and supervision of Mr. Prokes. Owl's Head in the Eastern Townships and Madonna Mountain in Northern U.S.A. were among the many successful trips made by the club. Mr. Wilkins, Mrs. Fowler, President David Broderick and Don Waldorf deserve special mention well, for the Ski Club's success.

Audio-Visual Executive

In the distant land of Room 117, under the spell of Miss Ellis, there live ten magicians, forever ready to project you into a wonderful world of movies; willing to die, and even miss classes. Special thanks go to these ten for a job well done.

Photography Club

Few know the little dark-room which is strategically positioned, we won't say where. Here, members of the photography club met frequently to print and develop their own pictures. At the beginning of the year they paid an initial cost for chemicals but discovered the rewards well worth the money. Throughout the year picture essays were assigned and the photographers benefited from the experience of reviving moments to live forever.
Science Club

Meetings, members of the club had the opportunity to satisfy their curiosity and to explore the fascinating realm of science, by the performance of experiments and by demonstrations.

Current Events Club

Monklands' Current Events Club consisted of only four members though seven or eight people usually attended meetings. The club was supervised by Mr. MacFarlane and John Hollander was chairman. Beginning in November, the club worked out a new Canadian Constitution setting up such things as a six-province system and a District of Ottawa, 1a-Washington, D.C. The highlight of the club's year occurred when Chief Andrew Delisle of Caugnawaga was invited to speak here. To sum up, the club has been a ground for battle debate and general fun.

CHESS CLUB

For the third consecutive year the Chess Club has successfully operated, assisted by Mr. Novosel. The members met at lunch to enjoy a relaxing half hour of chess, thanks to president Leon Blumer, and vice presidents Ken Vegolsky, John Cockerill, and Ross MacIntosh.
Mr. Whyte organized and conducted three choirs: the Small Mixed Chorale, the Full School Choir, and the Vocal Ensemble. These performed at school concerts, the Remembrance Day ceremony, the Graduation Exercises, and the Education Week Ceremony. The Small Mixed Chorale entered the Quebec Music Festival. Later in the year this choir participated in an exchange trip with Paris, Ontario. This year, for the first time, Monklands had an Alumni Choir, also conducted by Mr. Whyte, which performed at our concerts. It was excellent and we welcomed its performances.

Altogether, Mr. Whyte and the choirs have made choral music a pleasant experience at Monklands in 1968-1969.
Concert BAND
The Concert Band this year was sufficiently skilled to be asked to perform in the West End Inter-school Band Concert held in February. This band also aired its talents at the graduation ceremonies, at the Christmas Concert, and during the exchange trip with Paris, Ontario.

Intermediate BAND
It's a great pity that not enough attention has been paid to this backbone that replenishes the ranks of the Concert Band. Much credit must be given to these people who struggle with their music under the direction of Mr. Blair.

Junior BAND
The Junior Band is the greatest worry or relief for a tired Mr. Blair. He can look to a happy future with a promising junior group or can be worried sick as he imagines his senior band of the next few years. So we must pay strict attention to their squeaks and squawks for they will be the music of the future.
Le Bal des Voleurs

This year Miss Blake undertook to direct this French comedy which was performed towards the end of the year.

The man who came to dinner

Once again Drama enthusiasts of Monklands staged a play under the experienced direction of "the" Mrs. Rohr.
TALENT SHOW
Football

Senior Football

The Senior Football team had a mediocre season this year. Although improved from last year, the team was not able to pose any great threat to the championship. Ken Wilson and Rick Caluori ably coached the team to a record of three wins and four losses. The victories were posted over Verdun (1-0), Westmount (53-0) and Dorval (21-0), while defeats were suffered at the hands of Loyola (7-6), Marymount (4-0), L.C.C. (13-0), and the champions—Westhill. Monklands finished in 5th place. The team was led by Al Sverdlou + Jim Gallison. There were no outstanding players. I'm sure the entire school hopes that our senior team will continue to improve and possibly pose a serious threat to the championship.

Junior Football

Monklands fielded an excellent junior team this year, which enjoyed a successful season. They were coached by Mr. Vogel and Mr. King. Led by the outstanding play of captains Bob Stockden, Barry Engel and Neil Robertson, the team fought to a second place finish. They rolled to victories over Montreal High (21-0 + 19-7) and Mount Royal High (13-7 + 7-6), while suffering defeats at the hands of the City Champs, L.C.C., by scores of 23-0 + 46-0. With any luck, next year's junior team will repeat its performance of two years ago and bring the championship back to Monklands.

Senior Soccer Team

For a team consisting mainly of juniors, the Senior Soccer team made a good showing this season. We all know, it was due entirely to the patient and understanding coaching of Mr. Ainley. Let's hope that the team members will become a serious threat to the championship next season.

Bantam Soccer Team

In spite of the efforts made by their coach, Mr. Prokes, and their captain, Martin Webber, the Bantam Soccer Team blew another season. They won three games and they lost three games. Still, the team showed good school spirit and sportsmanship. Good luck next season.
Basketball

Senior Basketball

Monklands' Senior team had an excellent season this year. Led by the patient instruction of Mr. Ainly, and the outstanding play of Doug Downes, Reggie Moore, and David Bates, the squad lost only two games, both by very close scores. They were undefeated at home. This was largely due to the enthusiastic support, both vocal and instrumental, given them by aroused Monklanders. Next year, hopes are high for an even better season from an even more experienced team.

Junior Basketball

In late November the tryouts for the Bantam basketball team were held. There was a huge turnout and after 3 practices, 14 players were chosen by the coaches Mr. Simon and Ron Steinberg. Diligent practice sessions were held after school, in the morning and at noon. The team charged into their first game, confident of victory. The final score was 39-22, for Howard S. Billiangs. We went into our next 4 games with high hopes, but came out of them with severe trashing. We finally filled in the "WON" column with our first victory - a slaughter. Unfortunately, we resumed our old ways and lost our next 3 games. High scorers on the team were assistant-captain, Lorne Galler, captain, Martin Skabourskis, and Neil Robertson. All we can hope for is a vastly improved season next year.

The Golf Team

The championship was played at Elmridge Golf and Country Club on Bizard Island. The matches were played on Friday 13th, on an extremely cold and windy afternoon. Although scores were high, Monklands place a strong 10th among 32 Quebec teams. Low scorer for Monklands was Richard Marsh with a 38-46 total of 84. Followed by Doug Wilsons 43-48 total of 91, next was John Russette 48-47 total of 95 and then Frank Sinclair 50-47 total of 97.
Gymnastics

Although the gymnastic tryouts began shortly before Christmas there were no competitions until about a month later. The senior and bantam teams consisted of about 30 students from all four grades. Both teams lost their first exhibition games against H. S. B. H. S., but since then, the bantams have been very successful in all of their meets.

Curling Club

The Monklands Curling Club had a fair amount of good luck this year. In addition to the regulars, we had several new curlers. This year most of the regular curlers will be leaving so it will be up to these new curlers to help the Monklands team. The three teams were skipped by Glen Canavan, Phil Harden and Steve Leclaire, each having a lot of success. The teams would like to thank Mr. Williams and Mr. Wilkinson.

Water-Polo

The Water Polo team had a tough season this year, as they should have been a junior team instead of a senior one. But, we all know of course, that if Mr. Bradley had been swimming, the championship would have been theirs.
Junior Basketball

The Juniors played in the school tournament this year but did not place. According to the coach, it was due to the lack of interest. She hopes that they will use their practice time more carefully next year.

Intermediate Basketball

The Intermediates did not do as well this year as we would have hoped. Maybe with a little more work, they may place next year.

Senior Basketball

Mr. Shalinsky did wonders for the Senior Basketball team this year and the girls worked very hard. They entered the City Finals and won their division. They lost the finals, however, to Northmount.
Bantam Basketball

The Bantams did exceptionally well this year. They lost the city championship title by only one basket to Dorval High.

GYMNASTICS

We had four gymnastic teams entered in the city championships this year. The seniors competed at Lachine High on Feb. 20, 1969. Monklands was represented by J. Black and A. Bailey. On Feb. 25, 1969, the intermediate team travelled to Outremount High. S. Ling S. Mattar, S. Simpson, P. Peterson and J. Linton took part. The Juniors went to Westmount High Feb. 27, 1969 and placed thirteenth out of fifteen schools. Monklands' team was S. Hanson, R. Fineberg and D. Clark. Monklands was represented by J. Brown, D. Chouinard, J. Paine, and L. Simpson.

TENNIS ANYONE?

A team was entered in the inter-high school championship which was held at Monklands Tennis Club on October 3, 1968. It was the team's first match and they placed fourth among 8 entries.

It all began 100 years ago on December 8, 1869, when Timothy Eaton, a young man from Ballymena, Ireland, opened a small dry goods store in Toronto.

The original staff consisted of two men, a woman and a boy. Today, during Eaton's Centennial Year, the staff now numbers more than 50,000 employees — and to date more than 11,000 Eatonians have given 25 years or more of service.

In less than 100 years, Eaton's has continually grown and expanded to become the largest retail organization in the country, and it's still growing, still expanding, to serve better the people of Canada. New stores such as Eaton's Pointe Claire and Ville d'Anjou have provided interesting new opportunities for many young people here in Montreal — and there's more expansion planned for the near future.

Wouldn't you like to be part of all this action? Wouldn't you like a career with creative excitement, opportunity and challenge ... a position where you can grow and advance in Canada's dynamic retail industry? THEN THINK ABOUT EATON'S. We may be 100 years old but we still have a lot of young ideas!

Why not visit Eaton's Employment Office, Ninth Floor, Downtown, and discuss your career plans with us?
